Beef and Vegetables

Some homemakers make beef and vegetable stew because it's thrifty, others because it's flavorful and attractive, and still others because it's a one-dish meal that shortens the clean-up job afterwards — all good reasons. But nutritionists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture suggest another. They point out that vegetables contribute vitamins to supplement the meat and thus make the dish better-balanced nutritionwise. Tomatoes not only add flavor and color but are most important for vitamin C, as carrots are for vitamin A. For many people stew isn't stew without potatoes. Green peppers, turnips or cauliflower are other vegetables that add vitamin C. A point for the stew-maker to remember is not to overcook the vegetables but to add them when the meat is partially tender — late in the cooking.

The happy combination of nutrients holds for other meat and vegetables dishes. Ground beef patties or hamburgers may be served with tomato sauce and enhanced with bright carrots and green pepper, when served in a border of fluffy boiled rice. Pot roast, too, is a thrifty beef dish that needs the good company of vegetables.

Sometimes a congressional chaplain must get pretty discouraged.

..WATER HAS BEARING ON MILK PRODUCTION

The amount of water dairy cattle drink has a lot to do with how much milk they produce.

Dairy husbandmen at VPI say tests have shown that providing water by means of automatic drinking cups, so animals have free access to water, increases the milk yield of high producing cows about 4% over watering twice daily; and 6 to 11% over watering once daily.

This isn't hard to understand when you consider that milk is 87% water. Including both the water in the feed and the water which is consumed as such, cows will take in about 3.5 to 5.5 pounds of water per pound of milk produced.-High protein feeds increase water consumption somewhat. From 12 to 15 gallons per head daily is an average amount for a herd, including both cows in milk and dry cows. However, cows producing 75 to 100 pounds of milk a day may drink 35 to 40 gallons of water daily.

The specialists say further that the use of automatic drinking cups save labor and help provide a more sanitary supply of water to the herd. A small, slow-moving stream is a potential source of organisms such as those which cause blackleg, anthrax, and brucellosis.

Water plays an important role in the barn and milk room too. To produce high quality milk the udder of the cow, the person doing the milking, and all the milking equipment must be clean. This means using a lot of hot water.

A study was made at VPI on the amount of hot water used in the barn and milk house for the operations in producing high milk. The total amount used milking varied from 10 gal 15-cow dairies to 60 gal cow dairies. The length of water was used during mi led from 1½ to 3 hou the milk on farms is cool ter, so this increases eff the importance of water i ing good milk.

Warning To Dog Owners

There have been several cases of rabies among dogs in Campbell County, Fairview Heights area, in the past week.

The County Supervisors of Campbell County have ordered restriction of all dogs to owners' premises, until the 25th of November, and are offering innoculations to dogs of that county.

So far no cases have appeared in Appomattox County, but dog owners and residents are requested in case of dog or animal bite to see their physician for treatment and to notify the county sanitarian. Do not shoot the dog. Tie him up. Be sure to ascertain the owner of the dog. In cases of illness or sudden death of dog from unknown causes, also notify the county sanitarian.

This request is made in an effort to forestall any possibility of epidemics as has been reported in several northern counties in the past several years.

Information may be sent to: Appomattox County Health Department Appomattox, Virginia, or call Appomattox 2801.

Welfare Dept. Notes Cost Rise

Requests for services from public welfare departments have been rising steadily, according to Mrs. Hazel R. Mann, Superintendent of Public Welfare for Appomattox County, while applications for financial assistance have generally decreased.

This recent trend is noted in statistics compiled by the State Department of Welfare and Institutions, the Superintendent said.

There were 321 more applications for services and financial assistance during August than during July, and most of these were requests for services and foster care. Requests for financial assistance in old age assitance, aid to the permanently and totally disabled and general relief totalled 196 less than July, and requests for aid to dependent children were 104 more than that month.

There were 890 more children receiving child welfare services at the end of August, 1954, than in the same month of 1953, the Superintendent said. Services to 9,867 children were given by welfare departments in Virginia during August.

These included adoption studies and placements, foster placements, probation supervision, supervision for the Department of Welfare and Institutions, and other services.

Total public assistance cases rose in August to 37,576 from 37,409 in July. Total payments for August were $1,513,014, up $19,027 from July, the Superintendent said.

Abbitt Speaks At 5th District Democrat Rally

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt of Appomattox, Fourth District Congressman, was the principal speaker at a Fifth District Democratic rally in Danville Tuesday. Abbitt was introduced by Fifth District Representative William M. Tuck.

Mr. Abbitt said that "many are calling upon the people to elect a Republican Congress in order to help the President carry out his program, but I say to you there would have been no program except for the help of many Democrats who put their country above everything else."

Abbitt characterized the Republican administration as "a story of drift in the face of economic recession and unemployment at home." He charged that Secretary of State Dulles is "now flying frantically over the globe trying to pick up the pieces of his foreign policy and put back together the prestige and leadership developed during and after World War II."

He said he hopes Dulles is successful "for the sake of all of us," but he added that he also hopes that "he and his party have learned a lesson." The lesson, said Mr. Abbitt is this: "When you say things you don't mean, you don't scare the Kremlin, you only confuse and alienate your allies. An American Secretary of States should not talk about 'liberation' when he does not mean to do anything about it. He should not pretend that the 'new look in defense' means defense for less money, when it does not."
